3210 continuous casting of aluminium - afcma - 3210.04 distinguishing features of continuous casting technologies the continuous casting technologies can be divided by processes into • horizontal or • vertical casting direction. and by mould type • fixed or • mobile walls. in the later case the walls are moving with the molten metal, while the walls are motionless in the former. continuous casting (metallurgy) - university of illinois - b.g. thomas, "continuous casting", yearbook of science and technology, mcgraw-hill, 2004.3 the process is started by plugging the bottom of the mold with a "dummy bar". after enough metal has solidified above it (a process similar to conventional casting), the dummy bar is slowly putting horizontal continuous casting machine into trial ... - key words: horizontal continuous casting, rolling, high-alloyed steels, special alloys, mini-metallurgical pro-duction, tundish, withdrawal, moulds. i n the context of the significant cost of credit resources, construction of giant plants with large metallurgical aggregates becomes quite costly event. effect of electromagnetic stirring on solidification ... - by horizontal continuous casting has been realized [1-2], but owing to the lower thermal conductivity of austenitic stainless steel (much smaller compared with that of plain carbon steel), pronounced defects during horizontal continuous casting of austenitic stainless steel, such as coarse columnar and equiaxed continuous casting: modeling - university of illinois - continuous casting: modeling continuous casting is used to solidify most of the 750 million tons of steel, 20 million tons of aluminum, and many tons of other alloys produced in the world every year. most previous advances have been based on empirical knowledge gained from experimentation with the process. regulation of heat transfer in the horizontal continuous ... - horizontal continuous casting molten metal is first chilled in a mould, then further cooled by water sprays and finally by free convection and radiation. the mould comprised a graphite sleeve and a water cooled jacket is one of the major components of horizontal continuous caster. its purpose is dc casting of aluminium: process behaviour and technology - reached. in the horizontal version, a flying saw cuts the ingot to length as it emerges and casting can be fully continuous. there is a version of the vertical process for copper which also has a flying saw, and the ingot is supported by pinch rollers. the casting speed depends on alloy and size, but is typically in the 1-3 mm/s range. mould taper optimization for continuous casting steels by ... - a mathematical model for solidification in continuous casting by finite difference method. e. g. wang [6] has developed a finite element mathematical model to simulate the thermal elastoplastic stress on continuous casting billet in the mould so as to optimize and design the continuous casting mould taper. continuous casting plants for copper - sms-group - horizontal continuous casting plants for cold-rollable strip together with the technica brand, sms group is the pioneer for wide strip continuous casting plants and has a wealth of experience with over 100 reference projects. these horizontal continuous casting plants can produce strips 10 to 20 mm thick and up to 1050 mm wide.
